

Dear FCC:

Match your zeal for enforcement of language content regulations and investigate Sinclair Broadcasting's decision ("Sinclair's Decision") to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election. Sinclair's decision is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. Sinclair's Decision is a blatant and entirely self-serving move that contravenes the public interest.

If the FCC fails to investigate and publish its findings and actions regarding Sinclair's Decision, then the FCC has failed in its duty to the public interest as well. The FCC media ownership rules will be a collection of arbitrary, capricious and, ultimately, insignificant collection of futile guidelines.

The FCC will have a legitimate opportunity that is actually an obligation to demonstrate that the license renewal process is not a rubber stamp for interests that have turned the FCC regulations into a market commodity. Thank you for your time and attention to this matter.
